Definitions

CMYK – Cyan, Magenta, Yellow and black. This is the 4-color process most printers use to produce photo-realistic (full color) images.

RGB – Red, Green and Blue. Electronic devices (such as monitors, TVs, PDAs) use 3 colors, in various intensities and shades, to form the millions of colors available to those devices.

HEX – Hexadecimal. Hex numbers are used for Web applications and Web sites, but not for any print or physical media.

A special note about color

The way a specific color displays on your screen is dependant on the type of monitor you use, whether it is calibrated accurately and the type of program you are using to view the color. The equivalent values provided are color accurate to the specifications of this worksheet and should be used if an exact Pantone color match is not available.
